Kernel Driver Installation The install script requires the MS-DOS kernel to be able to install and update Windows drivers. The only way to do this is to replace the kernel already running on the system (usually MSWin95). Klean install attempts to reboot into the MSWin32 kernel, but it may be necessary to have another program running. Since this is a DOS/Windows interface, it is easy to have another copy of MSWin32 up and running. In this case, the process is as follows: Mount the disk image to a temporary directory on the remote system. This can be done on the target machine, or on a separate machine. (This is the "down" step.) Install the MSWin32 kernel on the image. This may take a few minutes to compile the kernel if the CDROM drive is slow. Once compiled, if necessary, run the installer. (This is the "up" step.) Reboot the system into the new kernel. Note that this is only possible if the boot flag for the MSWin32 kernel is set.
