Crack >. How to use the program. Cerberus Professional Guilloche Editor Crack Cerberus..Q: Determine the type of an IEnumerable I am using LINQ (IEnumerable) and I want to determine the type of an IEnumerable, based on the incoming data. The incoming data may or may not be available. For example, if IEnumerable was returned from a SQL statement and I wanted to know if that collection was populated (i.e. the data was not null), I can just do this: IEnumerable input =...; //code here var populated = input!= null; There are some collections that I want to know if they are populated, and some that I do not. Here's a better example: class POCO { public int ID {get; set;} public string FirstName {get; set;} public string LastName {get; set;} public string Address {get; set;} } var poco1 = new POCO { ID = 1, FirstName = "Bill", LastName = "Cook", Address = "1234 12th Ave" }; var poco2 = new POCO { ID = 2, FirstName = "Mary", LastName = "Tester", Address = "8806 16th Ave" }; var poco = new IEnumerable { poco1, poco2 }; var isPopulated = /* write logic here */; The only way to do this would be
