Verein für Fachliteratur The Verein für Fachliteratur (Association for the Promotion of Science Literature) was a German language organization which existed from the end of the 19th century until 1933. It promoted German and German-speaking literature and culture, especially science fiction. History The Verein was founded on 12 February 1883 by the publishers Adolf Duncker and Leopold Puchberg and the philologist Wilhelm von Ihlenfeld as the Deutsche Fachliteratur Vereinigung (German Association of Science Literature), taking over the activities of the short-lived Freiwilligenkommission für fachsprachige Literatur (Voluntary Commission for Literature in Languages Other than German). The first president of the association was Gustav Freytag. After the Kapp Putsch in March 1920, the National Socialists banned the association in October 1921 and on 14 June 1933 liquidated it. Its activities were continued after World War II by the academic association Literaturwissenschaftliche Vereinigung, founded in 1947. The Verein published the periodical Fachschrift zur Fachliteratur. Its founding editor was Gustav Freytag. Other editors were Oswald Spengler (1904-05), Ludwig Windelband, Hans Karl Brunner and Heinrich Scheel (1917-18).
