LONDON (Reuters) - McDonald's, the world's biggest fast-food operator, plans to sell off its global coffee business after paying to lift a ban on owning its own coffee beans, a move that will not affect its vast coffee shops in the United Kingdom, executives told Reuters.

McDonald's is attempting to reduce costs and needs to move from selling its McCafe brands in France, Germany, Spain, Canada and the United States to selling its coffee through third parties. Most of the McCafe brand coffee is served in Europe, but the $15.1 billion firm has said it is not looking to sell those, but it does not want to own its own beans. e79caf774b
