An immunogen, composed of a mixture of four gp-1 glycoproteins derived from HSV-1 strain CV777 plus the keyhole limpet hemocyanin (KLH)-coupled form, was injected intraperitoneally into mice. The immunogen elicited high titers of HSV-1-neutralizing antibodies, which were maintained in most of the mice throughout the experimental period. Antibody depletion studies revealed that the inducing antibodies were of the IgG class. The induction and maintenance of HSV-1-neutralizing antibodies was accompanied by the development of HSV-1-specific delayed-type hypersensitivity in most of the immunized mice. A monoclonal antibody specific for one of the glycoproteins (gp-1.1) was used to deplete specific antibodies, and its effect on the development of HSV-1-specific delayed-type hypersensitivity was evaluated. Depletion of gp-1.1-specific antibodies from the immunogen caused a reduction in the induction of HSV-1-neutralizing antibodies. However, the effect of antibody depletion on the development of HSV-1-specific delayed-type hypersensitivity was inconsistent. The second course of immunization with the immunogen alone without the removal of the antibodies induced a high level of delayed-type hypersensitivity in most of the mice. Despite the presence of anti-gp-1.1 antibodies in these mice, no difference was observed in the development of HSV-1-specific delayed-type hypersensitivity. Thus, gp-1.1 appears to be required for the induction of HSV-1-neutralizing antibodies, but is not required for the development of HSV-1-specific delayed-type hypersensitivity.// Created by cgo -godefs - DO NOT EDIT // cgo -godefs defs_solaris.go package socket const (sysAF_UNSPEC = 0x0

Why it matters: Americans are still waiting for the NRA to weigh in on the plan. I contacted the NRA after the announcement last week, and I'm still waiting for the group to respond. Behind the scenes, some NRA members have privately told those in leadership that they're so frustrated by what they're seeing that they could defect from the group, the senior official told me. And some of them seem to be organizing under the banner of a new organization, Gun Owners of America. Why it's important: The NRA was once a trusted defender of gun owners' rights. But in 2017, the group's board turned on CEO Wayne LaPierre, who resigned in June, after an internal fight over how to respond to the Parkland school shooting. The NRA has been riven by a struggle over whether to devote its resources to opposing gun control or to defending gun owners' rights. The NRA has been riven by a struggle over whether to devote its resources to opposing gun control or to defending gun owners' rights. Now, members, particularly NRA members, have been struggling to understand what the organization is doing, the official says. "They want to know what we're saying." The NRA's message: "The Republican Party supports you and the Second Amendment. No matter who's in the White House or who 6d1f23a050
